S I R,

OUR pecuniary and public Accounts being near settled, 'tis now become essential to ballance those of HONOUR that have hitherto been private between us: This can be only done by a genuine Discovery of OUR COMPACT, which 'twas judg'd necessary to defer till the first Transaction was over, lest one Account might casually, and indeed unpleasantly, have broke in upon the other. But your past Administration has all along implied a Misconception of my Silence, and seemed to construe it either Defect of Penetration, or a Conformity mity of Temper luckily adapted to the Convenience of your deep-plan'd Politicks, and therefore to be treated accordingly.

Hence, in the Cabinet, Security has led Finesse into too ample an Exercise against a Person whose Views were all sacrificed to the Support of your critical, exigent, and precarious Situation.

IN WHAT MANNER and for WHAT PURPOSE I WAS INVITED to Dublin, let our Epistolary Correspondence first delineate, then a very few Anecdotes will be sufficient to shew how far Words and Actions have since tallied—The Commencement you'll recollect was thus—Application was made to me by your Correspondent, Signor Pasquali at Edinburgh, to know whether I was open to a Proposal of Consequence and Duration; to which I reply'd in the Affirmative; but hearing accidentally that he had expressed the Answer to you in a Phrase somewhat peculiar (thro' Inexpertness in the English Tongue, as he said) I immediately wrote you an Explanation to the above-mentioned Effect, with this subsequent Remark, That no Proposal but a particular and important one would by any Means be acceptable in a Place where I was an utter Stranger, and that my Inclination naturally prompted me to visit London, where my Connexions were strong, and every Effort to please had formerly been cherished by an Increase of public Favour. This (the only Letter indeed that I am without a Copy of) is in Substance nicely similar, as your Possession of it will at all times testify on a Reference thereto.

But, as the Chasm is supply'd, the rest will follow in exact Succession, and verbatim (to wit)

To Mr. J O H N L E E,

Master of the Theatre in Edinburgh.

S I R,

I HAD the Favour of yours of the 3d instant, and, from an Observation of two Circumstances in it, am apprehensive that an Agreement between us cannot easily be brought about—The first is, your mention of Mrs. Lee. As you seem to like Candour in Dealings, it will not offend you if I speak my Mind frankly on this Occasion: Mrs. Lee was with me in Dublin during a Season; there was no one whose private Conduct I more esteemed; but I know in what Estimation she was held by the Town in her public Capacity, and consequently what Rank she must be placed in; this it is highly probable, from a very allowable Partiality, you would think inferior to her Merit, and hence might arise a Source of perpetual Discontent, to avoid which, were we to engage, I should think it a fundamental Article that Mrs. Lee should not play at all.

Another Circumstance you mention is that London is the chief Object of your Intentions, now I will ingenuously own to you that my chief Motive for inviting you to Dublin this Season, is to try in the Course of it whether a Plan might not be propos'd which should engage you there for some Years. I have been long weary of the Stage, and as I have a much more important Point in View, am determin'd to quit it as soon as possible; and no Consideration should have induced me to undertake it this Year, but the want of a proper Person to supply my Place. From the Accounts I have had of Mr. Lee's Affiduity, Regularity of Discipline, Punctuality of Dealings, and his other Merits, I know no Theatrical Person whom I would so readily chuse for a Successor. Were he to pass a Season with me I should have sufficient Opportunities of informing him thoroughly of all Matters which a long Experience may have taught me, with Relation to the Dublin Stage, and the Knowledge of which may contribute not a little to its future Success. I should imagine that the Prospect of being at the Head of the Theatre-Royal in Ireland, might be an Object not unworthy your Ambition, and I am sure with tolerable Management, it must answer extremely well in point of Profit.

But as I intend to perform myself this Season, your use as an Actor, and consequently your Emoluments cannot be so great as they probably will be hereafter. The Sallary which I would propose to you for this Season is thrée hundred Pounds, and that is one hundred more than I would give to any other Man living one only excepted, I shall request your Sentiments upon this Head as soon as possible. If the Proposal should not be agreeable to you, I have some strong Reasons to wish that it may be kept secret; for this I shall rely on your Honour nor have I the least Doubt but that I may do it with Safety.

I am Sir,

Your most obedient,

Aug. 12th, 1756.

Henrietta-Street,
Covent-Garden.

and very humble Servant,

THOMAS SHERIDAN.

P. S. I have answered yours immediately on the Receipt, I was not in Town when it reached London—pray present my Compliments to Mrs Lee—and to Signor Pasquali, whose Letter I shall answer soon.

To Thomas Sheridan, Esq;

At the Seven-Stars in Henrietta-Street Covent-Garden London.

S I R,

BEING four Miles out of Town when I receiv'd the Favour of your Letter, I could not conveniently answer it by Return of the Post; but take this earliest Opportunity of delivering my Sentiments thereon, viz. When those Circumstances, which you conceive Obstacles to our Agreement are slightly discuss'd, the Determinations will I believe be very brief and ingenuous.

First, as to Mrs. Lee; let me assure you, that I should hold myself cheap both in Principles and Judgment, were it possible Partiality (tho' allowable, as you favourably express it) could mislead me into an Intrusion of her Abilities, either on the Town or Manager; but when public Prejudices are known to have a private Source,* I am apprehensive such Things may, at our Interview, be advanced upon that Head relative to her former Situation, as you (who were never judged necessary thereto) will not attempt to disprove, and which the Rawsness of her Talents then afforded afforded too many Opportunities of practising against her ; however such References are here both tedious and useless ; 'tis sufficient to observe, that in Point of Profit she will never demand more than her Merit palpably entitles her to (I mean in the Opinion of the Manager, provided he is as candid and judicious as Mr. Sheridan is admitted to be.) Let there be a moderate Reserve made in the Distribution of Parts, with suitable Advantages of Dress, &c. and I here give my Honour, that your's and the Town's Acceptation shall, without the least Interposition of mine, determine her Fate ; as I am sure her Pride is too predominant to entertain a Thirst of undeserved Gain ; nor, unless it be evidently your Choice, shall she at the Close of the Season receive a single Shilling.

Now as to myself, I must frankly remark that the Prospect of being at the Head of Dublin Theatre, has Charms both lucrative and honorary ; yet, as they are only in Prospect, you'll readily admit, that for Reputation's Sake my first Year should be in some Measure proportion'd to my future Views ; so that, tho' your own Performance and Management will for the ensuing Season prevent the Exertion of my Capacity and Services, yet they may now and then probably relieve your Toil, by taking under my Inspection the Conduct of particular Plays where you are not concern'd.

I should be far from descanting upon my Abilities, were it not necessary to make a modest Observation of my Use both in Tragedy and Comedy, which I have Hopes will be found more adapted to your Purpose than any other Person you can engage. These then, -and the following Reasons, have drawn an Exception to your present
Pro-

Proposal, on Account of its Inferiority to my real Value: I appeal to your own Breast whether, upon Reflection, you think my Talents and Experience, my Expectations hereafter in Dublin, my assured Profits in London, and above all my salutary Regard to Fame, will suffer me at this Time of Life, to accept 300*l.* on the same Spot where Mr. Digges had 400*l.* I think it will appear impossible, but be that as it may; these are the Terms I must resolve on and offer to your Consideration, assuring you that Nothing but the Plan you have laid down of FUTURE CONNECTION, and the Advantages of the first Performer in your House, can, in my Opinion, recompense the declining other Proposals.

I am,

S I R,

Your most Obedient,

very Humble Servant,

Edinburgh, Aug.

21, 1756.

JOHN LEE.

To Mr. JOHN LEE,

Master of the Theatre in Edinburgh.

S I R,

I HAD the Favour of yours of the 21st inst. and must observe to you, that you have been led by some strange Misinformation into a great Error with Respect to the Sallary which Mr. Digges had from from me, as it did not amount to half the Sum you mention'd. One Season indeed, thro' a mistaken Judgment of something more promising at his setting out than his Performance afterwards made good, I agreed to give him 300*l.* but his Sallary during the succeeding Seasons was only 8*l.* per Week Play-House Pay; which did not quite amount to 180*l. per Ann.* But suppose I should at a particular Time have given too large Sallaries to any Performers, must I continue the same to their Successors? The Fact is, I did raise the Price of Performers to a Rate which the Stage of Dublin cou'dn't support, and therefore it must be so no more. If you come hereafter to have a Share in Profits (and it shall be your own Fault if you have not) you will have Reason to wish that your own Standard should not have been too high, as the Value of all subordinate Performers is rated in Proportion to the Principal. It was a Master-stroke of Policy in Mr. Garrick, never to demand a Sallary of more than 500*l.* previous to his commencing Manager, for he could with Justice enforce that Argument to any Capital Performer, who should rate his Value higher, that he never had more himself. And I can assure you that Mr. Garrick's Demand for playing a Season with me in Dublin, was but 400*l.* I have much more to urge upon this Subject, but as you desire my definitive Answer, I shall give it directly.

The very candid and equitable Manner in which your Proposal is made with Respect to Mrs. Lee, hasn't only remov'd my former Objection, but calls upon me to give her every fair Opportunity of standing or falling by her own Merit, as it shall be rated by the Town. I shall therefore agree to give the Sum you demand of 400*l.* for your joint Performance next Season; and this is the utmost
Length

Length that I can go at present. If you accept of this Proposal, as far as my small Penetration goes, I think you will have no Reason hereafter to repent it. I request an Answer by the Return of the Post.—If it should be in the Affirmative, the sooner you set out for Dublin the better, as I propose to open the Theatre the latter End of next Month. But be it which Way it will, you and Mrs. Lee may be always assured of the good Wishes of

Your very humble

Aug. 30th, 1756,
Henrietta-street,
Covent-Garden.

and obedient Servant,

THOMAS SHERIDAN.

To Thomas Sheridan, Esq;

SIR,

I HAD the Pleasure of yours dated 30th August, and tho' the Terms thereof are not adequate in present Profit to some other Views I have, yet from the Satisfaction I promise myself in our future Connexions, I shall accept them, provided they are the first in your House. This I suppose to be the Case, as 'tis express'd in your Letter that there is but one Man else to whom you would give more than 200*l.* and who I take it for granted will not now be engaged.

To prevent any sort of Misapprehension on either Side, I shall just intimate, that I conceive we both mean English Money, and that my Benefit is to be ranked before any other PERSONS in the Company. I am indeed inclinable to think, that you'll find my Attachment and Affiduity sufficiently advantageous to you to merit its being a clear one; however, that's left to your own Option, as I shall not be punctilious in endeavouring to strain a Stipulation beyond your Power of gratifying—Mrs. Lee's Benefit will, I suppose, be fix'd in Course of Salary; and if by Return of the Post our Treaty be compleated, I must beg you, for particular Reasons, to continue it a Secret till one of us arrive in Ireland. Please to accept Mrs. Lee's Compliments, and

I am, SIR, &c.

7 Sept. 1756.

JOHN LEE.

✍ In the Postscript, I remember there was an Enquiry who else you had engaged of. Consequence.

To Mr. L E E.

SIR,

YESTERDAY I was favour'd with yours of the 7th. Your Terms are far superior to any Person's in the Company, and consequently as you are the first in Rank your BENEFIT must be the FIRST. As to what you mention of English Money, I must inform you, that it is a Point never yet granted to any one, tho' sometimes insisted on. Nay, indeed it is one of the most fundamental Rules of the Irish Theatre, and which requires the the strictest Observation. You, who have been a Manager yourself, will more easily see the Force of the Reason on which this Rule is founded; for should the Company be paid in English Currency, tho' it would be but a small Addition to each Individual, it would make a monstrous Difference to the Manager, so as to swallow up a great Part of the Profits. I am sure therefore you are neither so unreasonable as to ask what has never yet been granted to any one; nor would it be your Interest, from Views of future Connections, to have so ill a Precedent set now for the first Time. But let us not have any Delays or Cavils about Trifles—I have such an Opinion of your Candour, that I dare venture to leave it to your own Judgment when we meet and have talked over the Matter. I must therefore request it of you, that you will set out for Dublin with the utmost Expedition. It is a Matter of more Consequence to me than I can now represent to you, that you should be in Dublin before the Opening of the Campaign; this will be as early in October as possible, but must necessarily be on the 11th, as that is one of the Government Plays. The principal Performers next to you are Mr. King and Mr. Dexter. Mrs. Lee's Benefit will come in Course of Salary. If you direct your Trunks to the Care of Mr. John Knowles on the Blind-quay, there will be every thing proper done at the Custom-house. You may assure yourself I shall not say a Word of our Engagement till your Arrival. I just received yours of the 9th, and hope the Gentleman you mention will soon join the Company. I once more earnestly recommend Expedition to you. The least Delay might disconcert my Plan in such a Manner that it cou'dn't easily be remedied. When we meet you will be fully convinced of the Cause of my urging this with so much Importunity. I know not whether an Answer to this will find me in London, but I must request that you will, at all Events, write a few Lines, informing me of the Time of your Departure, and what Route you will take to Dublin. I am, with Compliments to Mrs. Lee, and best Wishes for your good Journey and Voyage,

Your very Obedient,

Sept. 16, 1756.

Humble Servant,

THOMAS SHERIDAN.

To Thomas Sheridan, Esq;

S I R,

Edinburgh, 20 Sept. 1756.

I HAD last Night the Favour of yours dated 16th instant, and shall set out I hope in a few Days. Mr. L——t, the principal Council in my Law-suit here, has been at the Point of Death, but recovers very fast; when he is able to take Instructions of Proceeding during my Absence, I shall have no other Cause of Continuance; However the last Day of this Month shall, at all Hazards, be the utmost Stretch thereof, and even that I will contrive to shorten as much as possible. I purpose setting out for Whitchaven, and thence sailing for Dublin. Expedition can't, I assure you, be more welcome to you than it is to me, who am all Impatience for a State of Action. Mrs.

Lee

Lee begs her Compliments, and wishes you a safe and speedy Voyage as well as

S I R,

Your most Obedient, and

Obliged Servant,

JOHN LEE.

P. S. The Gentleman whom you expect will set out with me, which he hopes will not be too late, as 'tis most probable we shall all arrive before the Opening of the House.

A PERUSAL of these Letters will furnish ample Ideas of my Expectations in Dublin (to wit.) That you and I were in every Circumstance warmly to co-operate without the least Reserve, and in our mutual Adherence to found the Basis of a growing Estimation by the fairest and most advantageous Disposal of my Abilities; this too you knew was requisite, as they had for four Years (by my own Choice) been debarr'd the Gloss and Stamp of a London Currency; a Circumstance that (were not Candour and Impartiality the Characteristicks of the Place) might casually have subjected me to much less Approbation than I have been favoured with, especially as I was an entire Stranger, and no welcome Visitant to the Adherents of these Gentlemen, whose Parts I was invited to possess

But since, your Conduct after my Arrival never once wore the Aspect of either an honourable, or indeed a meer Acquittance of these Engagements, I must retaliate the Breach by unravelling your close-knit Web of Design, and trace the Fallacy to its its very Source: It'll be a Beacon to the theatrical World, and extinguish the Power of luring any future Merits into the Snare of your temporary and ungentlemanlike Uses.

Be it observed, that when such Letters pass'd between us, your Situation might possibly breed a Doubt of being ever received by the Public again; on the other Hand Inclination perhaps led you to evade (if practicable) the APOLOGY you was afterwards compelled to make.

These Points then premis'd (for your Application and Behaviour to me will be strong Testimonials of 'em) how, on a Continuation of the Rupture, was your House to be kept open? Who could be deputed in your Stead, either as Actor or Manager? Somebody must—Deliberation (it seems) presented me to View, as having given a recent Instance, not only of being qualified to manage a Theatre, but out of a Chaos in Scotland to create one: In Consequence therefore of such Circumspection the before-mentioned Treaty was compleated; and, agreeable to the Paragraphs in your last Letter, Page 11. where you say, "I must therefore request it of you, that you will set out for Dublin with the utmost Expedition, it is a Matter of MORE CONSEQUENCE to me than I can now represent to you, that you should be in Dublin before the Opening of the Campaign." And soon after in the same Letter, I ONCE MORE earnestly recommend EXPEDITION to you; the LEAST DELAY might DISCONCERT my Plan in such a Manner, as that it COULD NOT EASILY BE REMEDIED. When we MEET you will be fully convinc'd of the CAUSE of my Urging this with so much IMPORTUNITY". I was spur'd on to all imaginable haste in Coming.—But FOR WHAT pray was all this violent Importunity? WHAT CAUSE was

was you to urge to me when we met? How could the least Delay disconcert your Plan, so as not to be easily remedied?—Why, being partly appriz'd of your Reluctance to solve these Questions, I will myself commemorate the EVENT that gave both Birth and End to your soliciting.

I was by opposite Winds detained almost three Weeks at Whitbaven, towards the Close of which came on the stated Time of Opening the House; you (it seems) arrived a Night or two before, in a thorny Situation of Mind no doubt that challeng'd almost universal Compassion. The Theatre began, when at (the End of the very first Act), rose an unforeseen Conviction that you wou'dn't only be prevented from performing yourself, but that no Exhibition of any Kind soever, that had the least Tendency to your Emolument, should go on till a satisfactory Apology was made by you in Person.—There came the deadly Potion, there drop'd the whole Pile of Policy, and as it's foremost Column I sunk under it—Equivocation all was vain, and the Apology was promised: Just after this I landed, and was present at its being agreeably received.—Then all was prosperous, all wore the Face of Gladness and Tranquility; that unhappily declin'd into a sudden and too great a Calm: for, when we recount the Neglect shewn from that very instant to all your ensuing Performances, 'twill be looked upon as an inauspicious Æra of the Stage, and every individual seem involv'd in your Fate: The Retrospection can raise only Mr. Wilder's Character, who has fortunately been the Support of your Season;—but alas! neither you, nor I, nor Signr. Maranesi, Signr. Bugiani, Bugiani, &c. &c. have had any other Consolation than—Socios habuisse dolore.

Now—to the CABINET.

PEACE BEING CONCLUDED gave Birth to new Considerations;—what Occasion was there then for me? Why shou'd the Power and Profits be hereafter shar'd when there's a Certainty of Re-monopolizing both? So that to counterwork and annihilate the Professions made to decoy me hither, while your Fate was in Suspence, became the Labour of incessant Thought; PROFESSIONS too that were made in WRITING, That was the Fatality!—But to the Brave and Wise there's nought insuperable! Up starts an apt Expedient;—my Arrival being unluckily prevented till your Pannic was near over, Policy and the sudden Change of Fortune bad you straight smother the propos'd Communication, and by a sly Reserve gradually strive to loosen the Knot of our Alliance; this done, your next Endeavour was to smooth me into a Subordination: if that fail'd, then let Disuse be productive of Obscurity, and by such Means temper me into an Acquiescence with whatever Evasion of Promises you might hereafter think necessary to suggest.

YOUR CONDUCT then thus nicely plan'd, I was receiv'd with all the dignify'd Plausibility that constitutes your Character; mix'd and foreign Conversation pass'd an Evening or two with strain'd Civilities, then Sbyness spoke your Fraud: In short a total Breach of every Article ensued; and (your Apprehensions once set at Ease) Veracity took speedy Flight.

The

The direct Refusal of contracting again suitable to the Tenour of our Correspondence—The Deprivation of my Right, in Point of Benefit, by fixing it in a singular and most injurious Manner.—The Artifice practis'd to extort a Receipt in full, by reserving in your Hands a considerable Sum till the Close of the Season, that (if I refus'd signing it) you might embarrass me with a Law-suit—with various undermining Minutiæ of Stage-Administration, are too tedious to particularize at large UNLESS PUBLICLY CONTRADICTED; This, I am pretty confident, will never be the Case; since your Perspicuity must needs see the Danger of inviting a stronger Light to be thrown upon your Conduct: Therefore private Assertions and deep-concerted Equivocation only can botch up your Excuses, and friendly Father TIME be sued to -- for Oblivion.—Mr. Knowles and two other Gentlemen will recollect that, at the same Time I was oblig'd oblig'd to sign the Receipt IN FULL, I made a Protest against the Legality of it; so that YOU and I have still that •Ponit to settle.

Now then let us sum up the Whole; let us see what is to be inferr'd from the Nature of this Transaction?—That your Behaviour (dispassionately speaking) is no Ways adapted to so eligible and distinguish'd a Station; but rather shews a Resemblance of certain Indian Potentates who, by the Demolition of any able Friend, think themselves vested with an additional Acquisition of his Endowments; or indeed (on the Information of your frequent Variances with former Persons of theatrical Estimation) I am led to another Similitude, (viz.) “That of the PAINTER (mention'd by Dean Swift in his 50th Letter to Mr. Gay) who having painted a Cock, drove away all the Cocks and Hens, and even the Chickens, for Fear those who pass'd by the Shop might make a Comparison with his Work.

I am,

S I R,

Dublin, June

4. 1757.

Yours, &c.

JOHN LEE.
